A Gorgeous Brocade Gown

This is literally a golden gown. The skirt is made of gold brocade, showing flowers in light shades of rose and green. The skirt is held up by a very short waist of lace having ribbon shoulder straps. The fabric arrangement is made of cream dotted net edged with fine lace. From the shoulders hang a drape of gold lace ending in front in heavy gold tassels.

"The Private Secretary"

"The Private Secretary" as produced by home talent for the benefit of the Sunshine society, drew a representative audience to the El Paso theater Thursday evening, and was particularly pleasing.

All the performers were well known to the people in the audience and each received warm and enthusiastic applause on first appearance and all were followed with interest throughout the three acts of the play. The applause was generous and deserved. Several handsome bouquets and baskets of flowers were passed over the footlights as various favorites in the cast made their appearance.

Will Marr as Rev. Robert Spaulding probably secured the lion's share of the applause, while the other members of the cast were not overlooked, for all really did good work for amateurs; to many of them, it was their first appearance on any stage.

The performance was made the occasion for an outpouring of society people and the display of handsome gowns was the best of the theatrical season. All the boxes were occupied by society people anxious to help make the affair a financial as well as social success. In both instances there was no disappointment.

The members of the Sunshine society, under the direction of Mrs. Wm. H. F. Todd, president, worked hard to dispose of the tickets and their success was measured by the large attendance; that the performers worked hard was thoroughly evident in the splendid manner in which they acquitted themselves.

In the cast were: Marsland, M. F. H. Jr., Frank A. Hughes; Harry Marsland (his nephew), Oakley Sharpe; Mr. Cattermole, Vance Stewart; Douglas Cattermole (his nephew), Emmett Hines; Rev. Robert Spaulding, W. K. Marr; Sydney Gibson (tailor of Bond street), W. K. Ramsey; John (a servant), Francis Moore; Knox (a writ server), Paul R. Leeper; Edith Marsland (daughter to Mr. Marsland), Ruth McCurdy; Eva Webster (her friend and companion), Gertrude Ellis; Mrs. Stead (Douglas's landlady), Anna Grace Ellis; Miss Ashford, Janie Ellis.

Parties

Mr. and Mrs. Winchester Cooley will celebrate the opening of their new home in Clarendon with a house party. Their guests for the occasion will be Mr. and Mrs. J. P. Coles, Henry Beach, Fred J.
